1. Abstract

The Recently concluded US election (2016) is said to be one of the most bitterly fought elections in the history of the country. Hillary Clinton,representative of the Democratic Party, and Donald Trump,representative of the Replubican Party, battled for Presidency for more than 3 months in which many bitter words were exchanged, very deep secrets of each were revealed, their careless negligences brought to limelight and worse,divisions within the American demography were opened wide apart for political gains.

The drama concluded with Donald Trump winning the elections,ending Obama's tenure and marking the turning over of a new fresh leaf for America.

In our analysis,we want to record the response of the Global public to the unexpected results of the American election,which had had glued their eyes to the television sets for more than a year now, using Sensitivity Analysis tools in R Programming Environment. We chose Twitter to analyse reactions and sentiments of the general public to Donald J. Trump's victory in the 2016 US Election.

2. Introduction

2.1 What is Sentiment Analysis?

With nearly 40% of the world equipped with internet facilities, information flow and opinion sharing are taking place at a pace never seen before. The reviews and comments on a company's products and services, ratings of songs and movies , opinions on geo-political situations and many more, flood our cyber space.

Sentiment analysis refers to the task of classifying whether the opinions presented in a text are optimistic ,pessimistic or neutral by nature. It is a part of data mining,in which the polarity of the text is found out. In advanced Sensitivity analysis,"Beyond polarity" analysis, more complicated emotions,like being angry ,or sad,etc are taken into account. The classifiers use techniques of Naïve Bayes, kNN, and SVM.

2.2 Twitter and opinion sharing

We chose to work with twitter since we feel it provides a better approximation of public sentiment , as opposed to internet articles and web blogs. The amount of relevant data is much larger for twitter, as compared to traditional blogging sites. Moreover the response on twitter is lower and also more general opinion is available,which makes analysis easier and more effective.

2.3 Applications of the project

The project can be used as a model for application of sentimental analysis in Contemporary politics.It can be used by Political Scientists , political psychologists and anyone interested in contemporary politics to analyze the response to the results of 2016 US elections. If used properly, in future this project could help parties to have a greater insight in the selection of candidates ,issues to be raised and choosing the right person to the party leader. This project will not only help to strengthen the democracy but also help the general people by raising the issues which concern them the most.

3. About the analysis

3.1 Data set chosen

The data set chosen(The tweets) for the analysis were taken within 3 hours of Trump winning the historic election. The tweets capture the raw and unbiased reactions of people and their reactions to that moment. twitteR package from R Programming Environment was used for obtaining data.

3.2 Packages used

- twitteR
- tm
- RCurl
- wordcloud

4. Method of approach

We applied the following steps to come up with the twitter analysis on Trump.

- In order to obtain relevant data from Twitter, we used twitteR package in R. We fetched 1000 recent tweets within 3 hours of Donald Trump's victory.
- To filter the data and to bring it to proper process-able form, we:
 - Created a Corpus of text(the tweets)
 - Converted all texts to lower case
 - Removed punctuation
 - Removed stop words
 - Removed removed not-so-useful words
 - Generated the wordclouds
- We searched twitter for the words generated from the result and came up with the analysis. We present the tweets we analysed as a support for our claims.

6. Tweets and the analysis

From the wordcloud and the analysis of the twitter comments,it seems clear that the American public , along with the global population are not very happy with the election results.Eminent scholars have sighted caution and Global leaders have stepped up for damage control associated with Foreign Policy changes. German ,Iranian Japanese and Lebanese leaders have been very vocal.Americans have been talking about moving to milder countries ,like Canada and Switzerland.In fact,Canada's immigration website has crashed in the aftermath of Trump win.There is also a scare of a big global market slowdown!

Speaking on a lighter note, people are talking about a strange course of events underway: Leicester Champions, Liverpool on top of League, Donald Trump US President;The Judgement day is nearing. Trump has been also compared with President Snow from Hunger games and the minorities with the mockingjay rebellion.

Here are some screen shots of tweets posted within 40 hours of Donald Trump being elected. This would help to capture the mood of Netizens over Donald Trump's win.

Bill Mitchell @mitchellvii · 3h Does George Soros secretly love Donald Trump? He keeps funding these violent protests which only serve to remind us we need Trump.

@JABA LIBARRETT · 3h Although Donald Trump has office, he does not have us. We must continue to stand in love, faith and God. Please, don't let this tarnish you.

Seton @HiMyNameIsSeton · 3h I love a good protest as much, if not more, than the next guy, but you can't protest Trump won. He won fair and square...

Sheila Gunn Reid @SheilaGunnReid · 3h I absolutely love the happiness of coal miners right now. They know the war on coal is over with the election of Trump. #MakeCoalGreatAgain

Jacob Bernstein  @BernsteinJacob · 4h
Signs that say "Lead with Love" and "We Shall Overcome." At Trump Tower.

7. Conclusion

Sentiment analysis is indeed a powerful tool to analyze the overall public sentiment on an issue. With varied amounts of heterogeneous data flooding in at unprecedented rates, it wouldn't be equivocal to claim that Sentiment Analysis holds the key to future. Further research in Natural Language Processing would improve its techniques further, making it among the most indispensable tool of our times. It would let us explore avenues left unexplored before.

Results of election of 2016 are ground-breaking. It has opened doors of presidency to a man with no political background or favour. But Donald Trump's opinions about sensitive issues, like Muslims, Immigrants, Police Detention, Gun Control, Nuclear deals, use of nuclear warheads, Climate change and many others have put him in deep troubled waters. With Donald now elected as the 45th President of United States of America, people fear the beginning of a new world order, one that is a lot less predictable and a more aggressive, intolerant, impulsive and violent. Time will only tell if Donald can be a good President or the nightmares would come true.
